Universal Access Key To The Workforce Program Success

Little Rock – The Workforce Investment Act of 1998 (WIA) created a new opportunity to develop a coordinated workforce investment system. State and local governments are now able to craft job training programs to meet identified needs within their own economics.

Local workforce investment services under the WIA are provided through one-stop service delivery systems that respond to changing economic conditions within each local workforce investment area.

There are ten Workforce career centers throughout Arkansas. One of the key components to the Workforce system is the universal access provided to programs and activities. The ultimate goal of this universal access provides outreach to schools, colleges, community service groups and the disability community.

The Arkansas Workforce Investment Board is committed ensuring that Arkansas workers, including individuals with disabilities, are aware of the outstanding opportunities available through the State of Arkansas.
